Structural comparison of two mouse dolichol-linked oligosaccharide residues. We have prepared [3H]oligosaccharide products from rat liver and mouse brain homogenates. The purified products have been converted to formic acid or trifluoroacetic acid, and examined by paper chromatography, gas chromatography/mass spectrometry, and, in the case of the borohydride derivatized products, by 1H-NMR spectroscopy. The products were shown to be galactose containing glycoconjugates, having the following oligosaccharide compositions in common: for rat liver, (Gal beta 1----3)GalNAc alpha 1----3Gal beta 1----4Glc; for mouse brain, (Gal beta 1----3)GalNAc alpha 1----3Gal beta 1----4Glc. Our results demonstrate that the structures of the two glycoconjugates, in particular that of the common link unit, are essentially the same. Q: How do I run multiple functions with
