Manos Milagrosas. Masaje Relajante Masters, also known as Masaje Masters, is a castanets[1] clapping[2] type of Afro-Cuban percussion instrument. It is a hollow barrel made of wood with a foot pedal. It can be played with one or two hands and uses the palms of the hand to hit the palm stick against the castanets, rather than with the fingertips. As with the Latin claves, a great variety of accents and tempo can be created with the use of multiple accents with different patterns and hand positions[3]. [1] More information [2] More information [3] More information Manos milagrosas, or Gifted Hands, is a biography of the life of Dr. Ben Carson, an African-American orthopaedic surgeon who was raised in inner city Detroit. It was released in 2009 and was directed by Thomas Carter and written by William Broyles. The title character is Cuba Gooding Jr., who plays Dr. Carson. While the film received negative reviews from critics, audiences gave it an approval rating of 81% on Rotten Tomatoes.[4] The plot surrounds Dr. Ben Carson's life and his struggle to become a successful neurosurgeon in a racially divided world, while working at Johns Hopkins Hospital and establishing his own practice in Detroit. He was born in Detroit, Michigan on October 16, 1951 to a 16-year-old unwed mother and a 24-year-old single-mother with an eight-year-old son. His father, who was a bachelor, died when he was two years old, leaving his mother with two small children and seven other siblings to raise. His mother worked as a maid in a house, and his siblings were all young and younger than him.[5] He is quoted saying: "People will tell you you can't do something. Tell them you're gonna do it anyway." He had a difficult childhood and was constantly made fun of. He started to abuse alcohol and drugs at the age of 11, but stopped when he was caught selling marijuana by the police at the age of 13. After graduating from Detroit Catholic Central High School, Carson went to Morehouse College on a basketball scholarship, but left after one year, saying he was "too focused on the game". He then attended Howard University School of Medicine. While in medical school, he suffered from depression, thinking about leaving the profession, but his family and
