I have a 3D array that I have read from a matrix file and I would like to sort the rows in ascending order (by the first column of the matrix), and then each of the columns in ascending order (by the second column of the matrix). This is the code I have so far: filename ='sample.txt'; fileID = fopen(filename); C = textscan(fileID, '%d %d %d %f'); F = fclose(fileID); C = C{:,1}; %// sort by the first column T = sort(C); %// transpose C = C{:,2}; %// sort by the second column S = sort(C); C = T'*S; But, I would like to know if there is a way to do this using matlab? Thanks A: Don't be scared! The main idea is that in order to sort in Matlab you need to specify the order in which you want to sort. Your 3D array is a matrix so you can simply change the sort function to be the standard matlab sort function: [row,col] = size(A); A = sort(A,[],2); So, to sort by the first column, you just do A = sort(A,[],1); and you sort by the second column of your array, you do which is equivalent to: A = sort
