About the LSTC LS-DYNA V9.71 R6 is the latest release of the LS-DYNA software designed for modelling applications in the high-performance aerodynamics and turbomachinery domains. Computational fluid dynamics (CFD) is a known approach used to evaluate the flow dynamics and related features of a particular device and/or system. CFD software can simulate the flow through devices, estimating the Reynolds, wall or Darcy numbers, as well as the local and global features such as temperature, air velocity and pressure. In addition, CFD software can be used to evaluate the effects that change in design parameters may have on the .
