Chapter 1 The Balance The night is slowly descending into darkness. The concrete walls of a small room seem to absorb the echoes of the calm from outside. The sound of a chair being dragged across the floor is audible as the movement of the chair indicates the movements of one of the occupants inside the room. The cool air permeating the room is gentle on my face. Not even the pain in my head can stop me from dozing off. I try to ease my exhausted body by leaning back on the bed. I shut my eyes. And my eyes fall on the dimly-lit laptop sitting on the table. With my thoughts still on the laptop, I fall asleep. The warm breath that falls on my face seems to come from the shoulder of the person next to me. I open my eyes. I must have been fast asleep for a while. The room is still dimly lit. I lie down on the bed. The familiar smell of shampoo and soap still fills the air around me. I hear my aunt say, "Wah. Tidak mengganggu." I lift my head from my pillow. I'm surprised to see that I'm not in my room anymore. I stand up and look around. It's a small room with a bed, a wardrobe, and a table. The room is dimly lit. There's a bathroom on the right side of the room and a small kitchen on the left side. The only window is covered with bars, and there's no glass. I stand still for a while. I listen carefully but don't hear any sounds from the other side of the room. I start to think that I might be in a prison. I lift my hands and open my mouth wide, then quickly close them. My hands are still there. So are my legs. I try to walk, but I can't. I put my hands on the ground and try again. I
