A simple, but extremely customizable, Excel-based spreadsheet for personal budgeting. Features: List of 20 items with 20 fixed values. Pre-defined categories for each list item (like "Charity", "Food", "Travel", etc), or all for all items. "Project" concept: the user can add a value for a category of his choice (up to 10). List of ten different kinds of expenses, plus a list of ten different kinds of income (and random numbers for those two), along with "input revenue (income + expenses)". More than 30 predefined calculations. Customizable results. Customizable budget (customize color, enter income or expenses, number of months, etc). Customizable date range for the revenue or expenses (1 month, 3 months, 6 months, 1 year, etc). Different types of budgeting, with three budgeting types predefined: monthly, weekly, and "project". Predefined Excel formula for automatic formatting of input revenue or expenses, based on date range, budget, and budgeting type. Excel formulas to calculate monthly or weekly budgets, so that the user need not manually enter them. Customizable report with graphs. Export to Excel. Save in CSV. A: This seems a very practical tool. I have been using a budget template for a couple of years now and I must say I am pretty happy with it. It's free and the only thing is that at the end of the year the figures are displayed in different colors. That's a bit confusing at first but after a few years it's fine. For one it makes you think that this year is a good year and next year is a bad year. Anyway I hope this might be useful for you. (ANSA) - Brussels, April 25 - Austrian MEP Christian Moni helped his party leader, former vice chancellor and interior minister Joerg Leichtfried, out of a tricky situation on Friday when the Council of the European Union changed course and rejected a request from the European Commission to help fight terrorism more effectively. EU heads of state have already agreed that EU states will be able to deport refugees for reasons of public order, including so-called Schengen border states, provided they are in serious danger or pose a threat to national security. Austria, a member of the Schengen zone, is dependent on the Commission to agree asylum requests for those deemed 09e8f5149f
