Q: How do I get this with regex I would like to make sure there are a minimum of 2 characters in the first sentence and a maximum of 1 character in the second. Can someone help with the following regex please: $str = "hi my name is john and what do you do?"; preg_match("/^(\\w*).?(\\w)$/", $str, $matches); The desired result is [0] "hi my name is john and what do you do?" [1] "hi my name is john and what do you do?" A: Match each string on the line using the pattern ^(\\S+).?(\\S+)$ You can use the \\S+ to match at least one non-whitespace character. The.? is a non-greedy match that only matches as much of the string as needed. You then have the non-greedy `\S+` match at least one more character.

Allows you to copy a macro from a website or MS PowerPoint presentation to a text file. The program can be used from the command line or from an external program, allowing you to perform actions on the macro files without changing the PowerPoint presentation. You can also copy a macro from the clipboard to the current project. The program offers a lot of options to perform the copy-paste operation:

- You can enter a number of lines that will be copied for each macro definition.
- You can specify the description of the macro; this will appear in the dialog box.
- You can add tags to each definition.
- You can specify whether the macro code will be saved in the project or in a text file.
- You can specify the format of the macro code. This includes three basic formats: TEXT, CTRL+BEGIN, and CTRL+END. In the latter two formats the code will include a system menu when it is executed.
- When the macro code is saved, you can open it in the Microsoft Visual Studio 2010 or in the Visual Studio Express Edition for Windows Phone.

- You can choose the size of the code to be saved.
- You can use the Ctrl+Break command to insert a breakpoint into the macro code. When the code is executed, the program will pause execution and show a dialog window with information about the current state of the code (the debugger window). The debugger window shows all local variables and local procedures that are used in the macro code. By using the Windows menu you can:
- Start the macro code execution.
- Display all local variables in the dialog window.
- Continue execution from a specific line of the code. The debugger window shows which line of code is currently being executed.
