Perhaps, says Mark Gill, who wrote the book Behind the Mask of Innocence, about a stalker who kidnaps a child. In the movie, that child is Julia Roberts. "It's not a new story, but it's always fun to watch," he says. "I love the trials and tribulations that a movie sets up, so you're not only seeing how things unfold, but you're also seeing it unfold in a way that keeps you riveted. I'm not saying I was riveted, but I was completely engaged. It's an amazing story, and I hope it helps other people." An avid moviegoer, Gill saw the movie when it was previewing a few months ago. The book is based on Gill's own experiences as a teen, and includes details of his character's childhood and family situation. "That's what makes it easier to relate to. If you're reading it and you're in the situation that person is in, you really understand," he says. He says the original version of the screenplay was written by William Nicholson. "I got to rewrite the ending. In the original screenplay, he got away with
