The Dodgers' 3-2 win on Sunday afternoon at Dodger Stadium was the tenth straight victory for the team, a sign that they are taking the final week of the season and the wild-card race seriously, and are also starting to break through some of the potential roadblocks that have kept them from being at their best at the end of the year. Los Angeles is just 10 games behind the second-place Giants in the National League West, but the Dodgers are in second place because of the number of games they have played over the last week. The Dodgers entered Sunday ranked sixth in the majors in runs scored, while the Cardinals were 11th. The Dodgers also entered the week with a 4.5-game lead over the Giants, but the Giants have been on a little roll of late, and the Dodgers' 14-5 win on Wednesday night in San Francisco and their 3-2 victory on Sunday were their only wins in the previous five games. The Dodgers were averaging 5.78 runs per game in the month of May, and they had just two games with more than six runs scored in that span, and then they won a game last night with just five hits against the Padres, which was the most lopsided game of the week. They had three wins in the span in which they hit their fewest runs of the year, and they were 6-10 in the first half of the season in which they averaged fewer than four runs per game. L.A. was 8-9 in the first half of the year in which it averaged fewer than four runs per game, and the Giants were 5-6 in games in which they averaged fewer than four runs. They have a 2.4-game lead over the Giants in the second half of the season, and they also have seven games remaining, starting with two at home and one in San Diego. Los Angeles hasn't been playing well offensively over the last two weeks, and there have been times when it has
