'Can't Wait To Meet The Cast': 'The Grinch' Voice Cast Speaks Up For Christmas "The Grinch" isn't about snow — it's about love. Thus, singer and actor Matthew Broderick's always-sparkling way with a sing-song on the big screen could, in theory, carry over to the page. But the folks behind the film — which will hit theaters this weekend — say that's simply not the case. "Can't Wait To Meet The Cast": 'The Grinch' Voice Cast Speaks Up For Christmas "You can't have a Grinch that's too nice. You have to be mean to some kids." Broderick explained at the Television Critics Association press tour on Friday (May 9). "So we'll end up with a lot of kids crying and running for cover. I think that [becomes] more of an emotional story when you see the Grinch transform because he has made a sacrifice for all of us." Added producer and screenwriter Robert Lopez: "The fun part for [Broderick] is to be able to see his character change, but do so in such a nice way." Broderick further dished to Access Hollywood that how he got the job was just a matter of luck. "I got a call from Jim [Carrey] when he was between jobs," Broderick said, explaining the filmmaker was planning to make "The Cable Guy" but was looking for a way out because he'd just have one movie on his hands. "He just called me up out of the blue. 'I need you to get in a Grinch suit, and I'm 82138339d
