Software manufacturers eventually realized that their sales were being depressed by the low price of freeware and that providing freeware for free would motivate more users to buy their software. Now, with the advent of the World Wide Web, inexpensive freeware is available more easily and more cheaply than in the past. We define freeware as free-of-charge software that has a useful and desirable quality and features to justify the cost. Freeware is a form of software that is made available at a low cost. Manufacturers are able to make a profit from freeware, but in order to produce a profit they must make a profit on each copy sold, thus the low cost. We have categorized freeware based on how the distributor makes a profit. The three options for this type of freeware are: Freeware is a form of software distribution where the software is made available at a low cost. The software is inexpensive to buy, usually less than US$ 25, and users are able to download and install the software using the Internet. The typical freeware application provides
