Related Events By Jeff Dalton, WSU News Service Walla Walla, Wash. – Washington State University was the only site in the nation to be named a top 10 U.S. Public School by the Council for the Advancement of School Administrators. The prestigious honor was presented at the C.A.S.A. conference in Indianapolis last week. The council recognized WSU's health sciences programs as the only ones in the country to be ranked among the nation's top 10. This is the second time in three years WSU has been named one of the top 10. C.A.S.A. recognized WSU's College of Pharmacy and College of Nursing for the fifth time in the five years the organization has been publishing a listing of public school colleges by health sciences, according to John Griffith, the college's dean of health sciences. "We're really honored to be recognized again," he said. "This is the fifth year the College of Pharmacy and College of Nursing is on this list." WSU received the award for its professional, technical and health science programs in biology, chemistry and mathematics. Griffith said one of the ways WSU's health science programs are recognized nationally is because the institutions the programs are based at have won national awards. In addition, WSU, like other health science schools, has its own award designation. WSU's Colleges of Pharmacy and Nursing are accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education. Griffith said about 42,000 students from the five states around WSU attend WSU's health science programs. There are 995 full-time faculty members at WSU, about 13 percent of whom work in health science related areas. Griffith said WSU
